

The Horses of Northern Nevada

Lynn Starnes

McKinley Arts & Culture Center - West Gallery

Sept. 19th – Nov. 4th, 2016

Reception: October 6th, 2016 5:00-7:00 pm

Gallery West in McKinley Arts & Culture Center hosts wildlife photographer Lynn Starnes. Combining scientific expertise with an artistic lens Lynn Starnes focuses on the mysterious complexity of nature, using patience, persistence, skill and little bit of luck to bring stunning and beautiful close up portraits of Nevada's natural wild horse population. Her main focus in her photography is recording an expressive moment in all its complexity of the wildlife in its habitat.

“Hopefully, I can inspire you to love these wild animals that have been my life and to inspire you to help conserve these wild animals and their habitats for future generations.” – Lynn Starnes

Lynn Starnes has 38 years experience as a biologist and wildlife photographer. She has spent her life observing and studying animals in a variety of ecosystems while working as a professional fish and wildlife biologist for various agencies. She started her photography business in 1993 and since then has won numerous awards and has thousands of photos on stock. Find out more at her website.
